Section 2	Retirement Payments

Article 27

Retirement payments for a retired staff member are divided into three types:

1. A lump-sum retirement payment.
2. A monthly retirement pension.
3. A combination of one-half as a lump-sum retirement payment, and one-half as monthly retirement pension payments.

If a staff member receives half of their retirement payment in the form of a monthly retirement pension as referred to in Subparagraph 3 of the preceding paragraph, the monthly payment shall be calculated based on the ratio between the lump-sum retirement payment which that staff member is entitled to receive and the monthly payment which that staff member is entitled to receive if all their retirement payment is received as a monthly pension.

Article 28

The retirement payment of a staff member who retired before this Act came into force will be calculated using their last base (or seniority) salary assigned during their employment as calculation criteria, and the base unit will be calculated in accordance with the following provisions:

1. Payment for years of service before the implementation of the New Pension System: for a lump-sum retirement payment, the last base (or seniority) salary of personnel at the same salary grade during the staff member's employment, plus NT$930, shall constitute the base unit; for monthly retirement payments, the last base (or seniority) salary of personnel at the same salary grade during the staff member's employment shall constitute the base unit, in addition to which a full NT$930 shall be paid.

2. Payments for years of service after the implementation of the New Pension System: an amount double the last base (or seniority) salary of personnel at the same salary grade during the staff member's employment shall constitute the base unit.

For a staff member who retires after this Act comes into force, the base unit for their retirement payments for their years of service before and after the implementation of the New Pension System will be calculated in accordance with the following provisions:

1. Payment for years of service before the implementation of the New Pension System:

(1) Lump-sum retirement payment: the average salary amount listed in Schedule 1 as applicable for the year of retirement, plus NT$930, shall constitute the base unit.

2. Payment for years of service after the implementation of the New Pension System: An amount double the average salary amount listed in Schedule 1 for the respective years shall constitute the base unit.

If a staff member had met the statutory conditions for receiving all of their retirement payment as a monthly pension before this Act came into force but their retirement takes effect after this Act came into force, their retirement payments for their years of service before and after the implementation of the New Pension System shall nevertheless still be calculated and paid based on the retirement payments calculation criteria and base units as stipulated in Paragraph 1.

When calculating the years of service at retirement, base units for any number of months less than one year will be awarded proportionately based on that number of months as a fraction of one year; any period of less than one month will be counted as one month.

2. Monthly retirement payments: for each year of employment, five percent of the base unit will be awarded; for employment of less than 1 year, one-twelfth of five percent of the base unit will be awarded for each month of employment; after 15 full years of employment, one percent will be awarded for each additional year of employment; the allowable maximum is 90 percent. When calculating the years of service at retirement, base units for any number of months less than one year shall be awarded proportionately based on that number of months as a fraction of one year; any period of less than one month will be counted as one month.
